

Where will your eighth-grader go next?

Catholic New York can help you and your child make this important decision. Here you'll find information on courses, clubs, activities and sports programs at the 48 Catholic high schools in the archdiocese.

2014 CATHOLIC HIGH SCHOOL GUIDE

Cardinal Dolan's visit to Archbishop Stepinac High School by Maria R. Bastone, September 2013

The date and time of open houses are included in each profile, along with the school's website and contact information. Each school is accredited by the New York State Board of Regents, with many schools receiving other distinctions. Most schools require the Test for Admission to Catholic High Schools (TACHS). The test will be administered in the archdiocese on Friday, Nov. 7.

REGIS

Offering tuition free Jesuit college preparatory education to Roman Catholic young men who demonstrate superior intellectual and leadership potential. A highly competitive admissions process is based on academic ability and performance, with special consideration given to those who cannot otherwise afford a Catholic education.

Opportunities Abound In Catholic High Schools!

Each year, Catholic New York publishes this guide to show all that our archdiocesan high schools have to offer. Clockwise from top, the foundation of education is our faith, shown here when each spring graduates celebrate with Cardinal Dolan at an annual special Mass just for them. Extra curricular activities, such as the regional New York Catholic Youth Day and the marching band program at Cathedral High School, show students how to take their talents to an evangelization outside the classroom. But it is in the classroom, as shown during an algebra class at Iona Preparatory School, that religious and lay staff foster a love of learning that will take students to higher education and beyond.

WHERE BRIGHT FUTURES BEGIN!

For over 50 years, Nazareth Regional High School has been a home for academic and personal excellence to its students in Brooklyn. The nationally recognized School of Excellence boasts a 98% graduation rate with 96% of its students going on to college.

The numbers do not lie, for the past 5 years, Nazareth students have earned between $3 and $5 million in scholarship money annually. Students can get an early start on their higher education careers with many college courses that are offered through an affiliation with the local Catholic University, St. John's.

"Nazareth prides itself on educating the whole student, spiritually, academically, athletically and personally, which we feel is the key to our students' success. Expectations are high and students are encouraged to excel at their individual pace and talents," said Principal Quiles.

There is no one size fits all formula for success. The staff at Nazareth inspires students to think outside the box, try new things and accept new challenges. It is not unusual to see faculty taking time to chat with a student on the bleachers. Sometimes they are offering advice on a class or paper, but sometimes it is simply to lend an ear.

So many great memories are made at this school, Naz is a home away from home for its students. In this exuberant atmosphere, students find limitless opportunities to learn more and connect with their friends. Impromptu student groups fill conference rooms and school spirit fills the halls. Dozens of extra-curricular activities fit any teen's interest or background. At games, the bleachers are packed to cheer on the Nazareth Kingsmen.

This year, Nazareth graduated 7 students who are going on to play Division 1 college basketball. "We are proud of these students because they truly embodied the Nazareth model of success by working hard in the classroom and on the court. This is why these students were so sought after by college coaches," said Quiles.

Alumni frequently return to see, visit and encourage current students. They brag about their high GPA's and share the confidence they have in their academic abilities after graduation.

Nazareth RHS is two years into its revolutionary Principal's Plan. The building has undergone extensive renovations including a new Science Lab, Media Center and Technology Center. The future has never been brighter for the school or its students. Nazareth is truly a place, "Where Bright Futures Begin."
